While people in the Southern States are still piling on their winter woollies, residents of the Redlands, in Queensland's South East, are enjoying walking, whale-watching, cruises and heritage tours in the late winter sun.

Perfect for a driving trip, boating holiday or simply a short escape by the water, the Redlands is fringed by Moreton Bay and extends from the outer suburbs of Brisbane through koala populated gum forests to the wetlands on the shores of the mainland. The region includes North Stradbroke Island - with great caravan facilities, Coochiemudlo Island and the tranquil Bay Islands of Russell, Lamb, Macleay and Karragarra.

In the Redlands, all roads lead to the Bay. The landscape is diverse, ranging from glistening beaches to mountain tops. For those looking for a scenic drive with plenty to see and do, the Redlands offers a variety of experiences to people of all ages.

And if you visit during late August, the Redlands are celebrating Queensland Senior Citizens Week. Over 60 events are being held during the week including concerts, luncheons, dinners, entertainment and an informative expo covering health, investments, recreation, travel and accommodation for those planning for and enjoying retirement.

Redlands Tourism can provide information, organise accommodation, transfers and tours. Contact them on (07) 3821 0057 if you're thinking of planning a trip to the Sunshine State; or if you're already in the area, drop into one of their tourist information centres in Shore Street West, Cleveland or Junner Street, Dunwich on North Stradbroke Island. -- ENDS
